N. F. Cod Situation.

Says the St. John's, N. F., Trade Review:

Fish prices are the same as when last quoted, but the bulk of the voyage of last season is now either marketed or in the hands of the exporters. The few small parcels that changed hands during the week went at the old figures. The foreign markets continue healthy, though, owing to high prices and restricted area of consumption, sales are slow. Exporters are moving with more caution than usual, and are not unduly rushing their goods into already overstocked markets. At all events they have no need to go this, for stocks held in St. John's at present are very small, and will be, in the ordinary course, exhausted long before new goods are available. The whole amount of cod-fish held here will not exceed 170,000 qtls.

Fulton Fish Market Notes.

There were light arrivals of fish from the regular market last week, due to the storm which commenced on Sunday and continued until Wednesday, which was followed by a day of sunshine, Thursday, when there was some buying, but not a great deal. Friday there was snow during the morning hours and very little business was done, the stands closing about noon. In all, eight of the market boats arrived with codfish, the total catch being 13,100 fish. The largest trip was 3300 fish brought in by the M. E. Bryson, and the smallest, 800, by the Charlotte J. Kingsland.

Business for the week could be classed only as fair, the supply of other varieties of fish outside of cod being light, and in most cases prices were high.

On Friday, Lincoln's Birthday, the market will be open until 9 a. m.

The bluefish supply was not large during the week although all sizes of fish were represented in the receipts.

Feb. 10

Large fish during the entire week quoted at 20c, mediums at 10c and small at 14 to 20 cents. The prices on small blues prevailed during the first half of the week.

The last four days of the choice haddock brought 5 to 6c price on Saturday was 4c with a notation of 4 to 5c on Monday.

The price on hake during the week was 5 to 6c. There was little of that variety of fish in market.

Western white halibut was at 12c throughout the week. It was practically no Eastern white halibut in the market, the supply from Boston being very light.

The top price for cod was reached on Wednesday, when steakfish sold to 12c. On other days, when the price was 5c to 7c, steak cod sold at 10c. During the last three days of the week, market cod was quoted at 10c. The first three days the price was to 5c.

Thursday's price on steak fish was 6c to 7c Wednesday and Friday 5c to 6c as asked, while for the remainder of the week sales were made at 4c to 5c.

Salt Mackerel Situation.

With respect to the market for domestic mackerel, it can only be said that the sparse stocks now held principally by a large Gloucester factor, not shown its pre-Lenten movement into consumption as yet, says the Evening Gazette. There is no significance to that fact, however, because no kind of salt fish has shown any that can be directly attributed to Lenten demand as yet.

Good Stock.

Sch. Cavalier, Capt. Robert, stocked $3200 on her halibut, each of the crew sharing $70.50. The cook's share was $103 and his line share, $86.

Good Stock and Share.

Sch. Onato, Capt. J. Henry, stocked $2575 on her recent halibut trip. The crew's share was clear to a man.
